Living kitchens

The kitchen is without doubt the hardest-working room in the house: it's where we cook, eat, entertain, work, play and relax. Here we look at clever ways to zone your space through layout and visual devices, so that it functions efficiently whatever you're doing. Plus, we ask a few famous foodies to give us a peek into their own 'living' kitchens.

This image Lacquer and Corian kitchen, from £30,000, Neil Lerner (neillerner.com), designed for this home by Barnaby Gunning Architects (barnabygunning.com)
Above right 'B3' elm, laminate and bronze-aluminium kitchen by Bulthaup, from £35,000; 'Wishbone' dining table, from £2,520; chairs, from £444 each; bar stools, from £696 each, all by Carl Hansen & Son; 'Octo' lamp, approx £720, by Secto, all available at Kitchen Architecture (kitchenarchitecture.co.uk)
Right 'Set' walnut, lacquer and stainless-steel kitchen by Rodolfo Dordoni, from £30,000, Molteni&C Dada (moltenidada.co.uk) ▶

'The Conran kitchen is a huge family room where the pleasures of cooking, eating and socialising exist side by side. I love spending time there – we use it for almost every activity you could think of'
